The Seznec Brothers

The Seznec Brothers have been playing music together since they were lads. Cory and Yann Seznec find their inspiration in traditional twenties and thirties folk music; blues, jazz, harlem stride, and more. Their music is rooted in Americana but infused with an array of other styles and themes. Cory plays clawhammer banjo, fingerstyle guitar, and harmonica. Yann plays guitar, upright bass, and a mean piano.

Influences and stuff...

Probably the most important musical influence on the brothers has been the vast library of folk music recorded by Alan Lomax. They love the spontaneity and sincerity of music created by everyday people. That passion for genuine music has led Cory and Yann to a vast array of music, such as West African griot music, Cuban jazz, French hip-hop, and Jamaican mento and reggae.
